CHENEY, W. T., Feb. 9, 1831.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONARY.

In your issue of the 6th inst. I notice that some one signing times! "Saning!," sends you a seignam that the people of Cheney were having a grand dublies over the supreme court decision declaring woman shiftense uncountinitional.

A feet hoodiums, did get together and made all the noise they were able, but for lack of numbers it was not very much. I can but agree with you is regard to that performance, though I asked you that he long arred class are in the minority in this community. But I suppose we must allow them to act out their true natures, ho matter how much it may digust the fair minded liberty loving majarity. You send they do not make their noise now they will not be heard, for the wheel of progress a rolling on, and will surely leave them its behind. hind.
I would advise those two benighted judges, (Turner and Langford) who seem to think has they live in the long age dark ages, to whoel hoo line now as quietly and gracefully as possible, for key stream the world moves they will soon have to stream to the inevitable.

A SENSIBLE OLD MAN.

The interview with Simon Cameron, published in Sunday's ORECONIAS proves that at eighty-nine years of age this remarkable man is as round in mind and altogether more suggestions in bis political forecast than some of our republican leaders who are thirty years this justice. Among his excellent atterances is his heartly expressed contempt for those who describe the present day as deficient in men of brains and power. Comeron declares that "if an emergen-cy called for a display of intellectual and physi-cal power we are perhaps as well prepared to-day as ever in our bistory." The "perhaps" was probably suggested by the fact that the nation, which had the most powerful frontlads and heaviest guns in the world at the close of the war, has foolishly neglected to keep pace with the rest of the world and is therefore weaker than it should be in the matter of naval and coast defences. But the main thought of this pharmy of the world and the world of the worl strewd old man of practical offairs is that the presents of emergency would develop our tal-ent, strength of mental power and physical re-sources as resulty and fruitfully as at any Deriod of our history of the as if he ever been of any nation that he presents of emergencies reveals our best power. The pressure of political emergency forced Hampden from the attitude of an ble, easy going country gentleman into that of a serious and sagacious statesman; made Cromwell a soldier, and Fym. Vane and Ellot great debaters and agitators. The struggle of 1840 was not their work half so much as they were is children, the spontaneous generation, thirdled by the spirit of the times, even as the stress of the French revolution developed its military power and threw Mirabam, Danton, and finally Napoleon to the surface; even as our colonial quarrel with England revealed to Patrick Henry that he was an orator, stimulated the dormant powers of Washington, Jefferson, Franklin, Hamilton and Sam Adams and lifted them to the level of the work of patriotic statesmen and soldiers. Walle these men would have been fairly tall figures in my time, for they were the natural peers of that rat order of practical minds who know how to legisiate wisely and govern successfully, never registate wisely and govern successfully, have-tabless the reason why our revolutionary period, our auth-slavery struggle, our civil war and our period of reconstruction were unusually fertile in able men was because under the pressure of the struggle for existence the only test applied to a public man is that of the wisdom, the innd a public man is that of the wiedom, the integrity, the patriotic capacity for his work. There was no party hate, because all had to he for the beleaquered country or it would perieb; so natural leaders had nothing to overcome on their way to the front of the people. It is not until the life of the state is firmly secured that party jealousy and private pique asserts itself and lighter and cheaper men find their way to the front. The demagogue is one of the canters of a calm world, the caterpillars of the state, when the piping times of peace are unbroken by nearing tries of war; but place our nation; to-day under the same pressure she was in 1861, and men of degenerate quality would no more darken the councils of state than the same sort did after the firing of Sunter. We would send our men of weighty sense and capacity without reference to printer our extent the fire of the same of th are no weighty some and capacity without retained to private animosity, for we should feel that the trivial day of pullices, as play, was passed; that it was a time for werk and not for vapor; that our precident or one governor must not be the shadow of a name, but the substance of a men, that our hardest next must retain the of a man: that our legislatures must not be clamoring cross, negligible of the day hooting owis.

To-day the responsibilities of exactives and legislatures, whether discharged ably or feebly, o not carry with them the life or death of the nation, but when they do we shall be found committing such important responsibilities to men who know enough to hold a citadel and defend the state, even if they can not r will not cajolé a court, corrupt a legislature, or pack and capture a gazens. Under equal pressure the Union of 1887 weald not degreerate from the Union of 1831-55, whose struggles with teaching as a les-son of unity in thought and action had nothing exceptional in its example of unity that speaks to us in a tone of rebute or despair of our own time. It was only the unity that all brave and particite people exhibit under the presente of grinding necessity; the unity of Prussia at bay under Frederick the Great; the unity of Holland under William the Silent; the unity of the colonies against the king. The unity and particitism of the American colonies had nothing a varenticum unity of the silent. exceptional, mysterious or strange about it; it did not differ a whit from the unity and patriolism of dur own North against the South in the cirll war; nor in its unity and absence of party sp rit does our colonia struggle rebuke us with any representations. The patriotism of the onial statesmen did not a nack more of noble superiority to party spirit than the frank pledge of set and influence that the war democracy made and searcely shopt to Lincola, when it erowded around the standard of the nation, pever to whisper party cries again until the unity of the nation was restored. It is not historically true that the history of the father of the Revolution, of the patriotic statesmen of 1861-65, in the lesson of unity and freedom from party spirit under presuja conjuine any rebuke toi us, their children. In the ashes of our stordy grandfathers we can see the children's fires that glowed so brightly during the great strongle for the Union, and put us again under ejuci presence, and from the ashes of those who restored the stag our children would be sure to light the tores of liberfy and patriotism.

It is a potable fact that it supreme court of the state has been divided for years on party lines in dealing with laws devised for taxal of the liquer business. The court, when demo-cratic judges were a majority of it, has uni-formly held such laws unconstitutional; when republican judges were a majority of it, it has held them constitutions. The legislature of the state is now republican, and the supreme court is also republican. Hence a new law to tax the salton, known as the bow law, has been passed and sustained upon appeal to the suprema court. The consequence is that over 2000 salons in the state have been up and the talcons that remain have been forted to pay over $2,000,000 into the treasuries of the several counties upon the "business" of the past year. This beats alike free sale or prohibition of sale, since in a state abounding in cities and karge towns, as Ohio does, the latter policy would leave the saloon about as wide apen as the former one would.

Ohio's present constitution was in fact intendsale, free, and it was entirely free for many years, till the thought was; adopted that though the legislature couldn't license liquor selling it could tax it. And this distinction between license and tax is entire y sound. The government of the United States licenses steamb attacked the property of the light part of the liquor traffic. and other vessels, but mass the liquor traffic. State laws have no authority over vessels; save that of quarantine, and the license granted by the Tennedy previded by Back's bill. Her, Eviates have of the United States has permit to a vessel to run in the waters of the United States, and a guarantee that it may do so. Over the liquor traffic, on the other hand, state laws do have anthrulty, and the tax levied by the United States does not authorize the person who is required to pay it to bear last might, is to the effect that an effort is rited States simply gives rotice to all whom it tested States simply gives rotice to all whom it may concern that if they engage in the business of salling liquors in any state or territ ry they must pay the national tax. It is left to each state to say on what general terms or conditions liquors may be sold within its limits, or whether they may be sold at all. If a state can emirally suppress the liquor business within its borders there will be no one to pay the United States for the approximation of the pay the United States for the approximation of the pay the United States. tax; but experience has shown that after a state has adopted prohibition there are about his many to pay the United States tax as before. This is merely one of the indications that prohibition cannot be enforced, or at least that no way bitherto has been found of enforcing it.

Down to 1810 Conjecticat taxed Incomes rather than property, but since then she has taxed property. The local assessors do their work so careless that the grand that showed 195,000 houses in 1871, but 33,000 in 1878, 95,000 in 1884 and 105,000 in 1865. A search of the probate offices proves that a very large amount of property evades taxation. In one district where they of $7.000,000 the estates in the tax is tween toy of $7.000,000 the estates in the tax is tween tory of $7,000,000 the estates in the tax lst were tory of $7,000,000 the estates in the tax ist were, amessed at only $1,881 000. From 40.080 per cent of the property passing through the probate offices escapes taxation. Among the Low taxes proposed is one of $8$ per $1000 on the capital of every new corporation, and a hax of 20 cents per $1000 for all existing porporations. It is proposed to increase the revenue from railroad taxation by $15,000. At ax of 3 per cent is proposed on all collateral inheritances or $1000. posed on all collateral inheritances or $1000that is, on inheritances which "do not lollow the usual fine of decent from parent to child or to parent, but go to a collateral relative or no relative at all." This tax will raise, it is ex-pected, $55,000, I such legances are taxed a half year's income, as is don's in Penesylvanis. The legislation proposed by such commissions has not herefore been accepted by the legislature, but was rejected in 1844, 1898, 1876 and 1881. In New York the comptretier arges the imposition of a special tax on corporate indebtedness, as a "a simple and effective method of reaching a class of property hereforce wholive untaxed as against the bodies issuing the indebtedness mentioned, and practically not taxed at all as against any one under the present defective method of taxation." The comptroller collarges on the injustice of permitting corporahalf year's income, as is done in Pengariyanis tive method of taxation." The comptroller enlarges on the injectice of permitting corporations to deduct the assessed valuation of their real estate as well as the value of all taxables shares of stick owned by them from taxables, and he suggests a state tax upon corporate indebtedness of one-quarter of a mill for every one per centrol interest paid thereon." A bill has been introduced in the Ohio general assembly to secure the placing upon the tax lists of considerable personal property that now escapes taxation. Its provisions are

It is not possible to give an absolutely correct answer to the above question, because there were no Brat-class; thermometers until the signal office was establisfed here, fifteen years ago. All old residents concede that the winter of 1875-5 was the severest ever known, and that the temperature was lower January 14, 1876, than oh any previous day within recollection. On that day the riercure in Fortland went down to 3 degrees alored reco. It is not likely that the temperature in the Willamette valley south of Fortland was any lower, though ordinary thermometers at that thine marked zero. Observations at the signal office show the temperature as a sheltered place at the top of a three-slow huilding in the center of the city. These may vary slightly from the temperature of exposed incatities. It may be said in a general way that, the weather in the Willamette valley never went two degrees below zero. The following statement of lowest temperature for the past thripeen years, laken from it, a signal service records, will be of interest:

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR OREGON CATTLE.—The market here is supplied with better beef than is usual at this time of year. But already farmers who have had the foreprough, to stall-feed some cattle are beginning to slevate the price. They weight, which is a good price. There is mourning and largentation among the cattlemen of Montana, for the herds of that section are about swept off clean by the brighting blazards of the unusually severe winter. A great many bankers and speculators have in-ested in the cattle business in Montana and their calculations have in-ested in the cattle business in Montana and their calculations have in-ested in the cattle business in the cattle its usness in Montana and their calculations have failed. There will be a great draft made on Onegon egain this summer for young stock unises the Montana speculators care got enough experisons to last them. Our farmers should all stall-deed a few cattle to eat up the email potatoes and oats, and tiling. They will find the play pays better and better from year to year. But this is a privilege easily abused, and the temptation to do so in very strong. Therefore, it ought not to be allowed except upon clear proof that the titinge of cultivation has kept pace acre by acre or field by held with the cutting and removed. Otherwise the public lands will soon be pillaged of their valuable timber by the contractors and employes of mill men, working under the guise of pre-sundors and homesteadors, preparing their so-called "farms" for tillage. But tillage means husbandry—the cultivation shall keep to the clearing, the how clear the plows shall there to the public and removes it therefore or dispose of it must be prepared to show that he is a lawful set in the time the cultivation shall keep to the clearing, is and and not otherwise. certainly when he says the use of the Lord's prayer, for either moral or religious purposes, would not be a recognition of the inspired authority of the bible. To question it in this way will certainty be to threw sneption upon other portions of the book, or on all of fi. When "Equal Rights" teaches his child to repeat the Lord's prayer he requires that child to recognized the Lord's prayer he requires that child to recognized the Lord's prayer he requires that child to recognized the lord's prayer he read it as a book of morals, then you deny its divine authority, and it is no better, relatively, than any other well-written book on morals.

In speaking of the benefits of teaching Christian charity "Royal Rights" seems to have an idea that all this must of nessestly be taught from the bible, whereas the fact is that Christianity, which is that form of social order, based on the life and teachings of Christ, is maintained and spread among us not so much by public teaching as by the communication of a subtle personal force from one life to another. It is in his way that we teach the content of homes, the exquisite delight of love and irrendably, the grantine sweethess of living blessad charity. Our modern incolostion of duties and of character is the advance from incarnate Christ to a wider union of heaven and humanity. It is an application of religion to mark tamporal welfare. That is what promotes "maintain harmony" and "manual charity, in our school system it would be impossible to separate the lamber from the kids, as "Equal Rights" suggests, it this matter of computer realing. is not one of personal belief, for he cambon appase me in reverence for it, but of principle; pust as being a temperance man I am opposed to problibition. The fact that an apparent good may come from the adoption of a dangerous principle, seems to have a strange fascination for "time of the People," While he does not make out a very strong case, he invise that the majority shall rule. Let us tunned into that a little. Minorities have certain fundamental rights which are dependent on the will or the conscience of the majority. It is to protect these that constitutions are made; which are so many settrictions on the power of the majority in the republic. So long as a disputed point, is necessarily involved in the existence of the state, the majority must rule. Hence, in he enforcement of the law of the protection of the country by military power, the conscionce of the Quaker minority can not be allowed to overtick that of the major ty. The reason is obvious—a continuation of the conformation of the state, and with regard to them one man's considence is as invitable as another's. To ride over it pouch shock.
